

Man Killed at Concrete Works

An unfortunate accident occurred at the Australian Reinforced Concrete Works at Albion on Monday morning, when James Henry Banfield, 37 years of age, married, with two children, was electrocuted.

Banfield, who was foreman of the fabric department, was a very clever electrician, and was extremely popular with his workmates, and his death cast a gloom over the whole factory. The funeral took place on Tuesday, the cortege leaving the deceased's home in Coburg for the Burwood cemetery.